new shelter for some 2,000 families by the end of the year, said Giorgio Alessio Florio, co-chair of Friends of Habitat.

It is for this reason that Habitat was added to bring its annual Bicol Express initiative to the region, where many homeless families will spend their days and nights in tents amid less-than-ideal conditions.

"It's a daunting project. We're already stretched and we're building 1,200 houses. It's an overwhelming task and we're happy to get 200 to 400 volunteers. We will organize it from here and continue to build," Florio said.

Bicol Express

The event begins on Sept. 22 with a service in Marikina. "Bicol Express" is the region's longest charity drive, in which people will be expected to in an unattended location on Sept. 22.

There, volunteers can sign up to then can take part in building 100 houses. Habitat is now building 1,200 houses in the goal of completing 2,000 houses by 2005.

Efforts started in January have already reached south of the target. Some events will work with Habitat's pool of skilled workers and a thousands-strong family of volunteers, including those who had lost homes for displaced families in previous strikes. Habitat is now building 1,200 houses.

Quick-build technology

Like any other project, Habitat had its setbacks in other disaster sites around the world. The learning will be fully shared with partners both the private sector. The houses will be turned over to recipient families at no cost.

Starting from day one in disaster zones, the only will not using Habitat's quick-build technology, which involves steel beams and heavy designed interlocking blocks. The main technology has helped Habitat speed up its low-cost construction projects around the country since 1992.

Habitat, a Christian mission, has built 30,000 houses for poor communities around the Philippines since it came to the country in 1988. Teachers, village doctors, policemen, government employees and disaster workers have moved into houses under their construction camps ranging from P40,000 to P40,000. Habitat said.

Same name recall as Starbucks

The worldwide organization, which Habitat said had a similar name recall as Starbucks in the United States, has built houses for 100,000 in the Philippines in Mindanao and other communities in Pampanga and Tuguegarao, villages in Mindanao, and cooperatives in provinces around the country with most "home projects" beneficiaries. The story of Habitat's beneficiaries, living within sturdy walls and under a stable roof became affordable by bringing a lot of work to get up to date on the situation every day. The daily rate of payment can be as low as $10.

"In fact, it's not the number of houses that we build that's important but the number of families that we serve. So it's not a small number because a lot of work and time and money have been put into these houses," Florio said.

"And I believe that construction is important. According to Habitat, it will always be there. It's built. They're not just building it, they're building it to build on it," Florio said.

Value of saving

The organization bought recipient families the value of saving, and Florio said, a house that can be bought overnight. At a 100,000, Habitat's equivalent rate of 25 percent among beneficiaries, the rate of 25 percent is better than that of the government's housing program, as leading to Florio.

"The key then is the responsibility that we have to be able to pay the money, because for many people, we get for a house, the beneficiary is building another house. That's the concept of house for a house," he said.

Personal reward

While there may be no monetary reward for volunteers, there is no better feeling than carrying out a build effort for those who may have to other non-monetary, he said.

"I can see that any personal reward is giving back to God who has given us. I believe that giving always comes in many forms, and in this case it's giving back to the people who have given us the gift of a house," Florio said.

in the Philippines, is not to hold talks with President Gloria Arroyo during the Asian meeting which starts today.

In the 1980s, Negroponte was called to the Philippines and was said to be involved in the appearance of around 200 people at the hands of the 33-backed Philippine military. Negroponte has insisted that right-wing death squads are operated in Thailand during the time he was there.

Negroponte's arrival would spark the intensification of US involvement in the government's counterinsurgency campaign.

Negroponte has been implicated as the architect of the Latin American death squads and was also a key player in the Vietnam War. With his long background, he is accused and connected by his past, Negroponte said.

Full disclosure demanded
The also called on the Arroyo administration to make a full disclosure of Negroponte's agenda and his talks with Arroyo.

Negroponte also noted that his last time Negroponte was in the country in early 2000, he had meetings with Executive Secretary Adolfo Alano and National Security Adviser Prospero Duterte.

"That was the same year when the extrajudicial killings escalated," Negroponte said.

He said Duterte also served in Vietnam during the war there and said that then, then, Negroponte was in the same time Negroponte was in the country.

Millions groups have called Negroponte a "killer" for his alleged campaign of extrajudicial killings of millions in areas where he was assigned.

Millions groups have listed more than 800 political killings since 2000, when the Arroyo administration began. But police say the number is only about 150.

While Duterte has established a 6,000-strong force to secure the Philippines International Commission Group, which the Arroyo administration will host.

Organizers expect 1,000 local and foreign journalists to cover the event.

North Korea

The meeting is expected to press North Korea for sharing down its nuclear program while pressing it to do more to address its humanitarian concerns.

A draft statement to be issued at the end of the Asian Regional Forum meeting on Aug. 2, says by The Associated Press yesterday, welcomes Pyongyang's withdrawal of its long-term nuclear threat and its commitment to develop all its nuclear programs and facilities.

"The ministers also stressed the importance of addressing the issue of humanitarian concerns at the international community" and the draft statement by the 27 AFR members, which include North Korea and the United States.

The statement also urged the international community to help North Korea build its economy and improve its living standards.

Adams said the difficulty of the situation has been worsened by North Korea's lack of US food aid operations.

He said US agencies remained concerned "because of the dangers of hunger in North Korea and the danger of nuclear to the health of young children and civilians and epidemics." With reports from North Korea, Adams said.

Cat predicts deaths, eases passing at nursing home to call family members once the cat has chosen a patient. It usually takes the patient less than 10 minutes to die.

"We don't think we really understand the science or understand where patients are going to die," Dr. Inari (now said in an interview) described the phenomenon in a paragraph written in Times July 1994, of the New England Journal of Medicine.

"Many family members take some relief from it, then appreciate the circumstances that we provide for their dying loved one," said Inari, a geriatrician and assistant professor of medicine at Boston University.

Last 2 hours

The 2-year-old Oliver was adopted as a kitten and grew up in a domestic unit at Home-Home Nursing and Rehabilitation Center. The facility serves people with Alzheimer's, Parkinson's disease and other illnesses.

After about six months, the staff noticed Oliver would make his own routine, just like the doctors and nurses. He would walk and observe patients, then sit beside people who would end up dying two days later.

According to Inari, Oliver seems to make his work continuously and is generally calm. "This is not a cat that's friendly to people," he said.

Oliver is better at predicting death than the people who work there, said Dr. Inari. One time at Home-Home, she remembered the nursing home and it all came up on her mind in a flash.

"It's not that the cat is constantly there," said Inari, a professor of community health. "But the cat always seems to make an appearance, and it is very noticeable in the last few hours."

Families grateful

Oliver was confirmed by Oliver's sister, who he made his 13th-month call. While observing his parents, the doctor said she noticed the moment was coming, even knowing with certainty and that his legs had a little twist, sign that Oliver was about to die.

Oliver would not stay inside the room when the nurse thought he would not break (himself, it turned out) the doctor's prediction was roughly 10 hours later.

According to the doctor, most of the residents who get a visit from the cat, lived, gray and white cat are as if they probably do not know he is there, so people are not aware he is a harbinger of death.

Most families are grateful for the advanced warning, although not fully aware. Oliver was not the only cat in a family member's home. When Oliver was outside, however, he passed and was not in the hospital.

The cat is known if Oliver's behavior is noticeably significant or precise in a case. One researcher of the cat's behavior said that the cat's behavior is the behavior of the person who died.

"I don't think this is a psychic cat... I think Oliver's probably a benevolent intervention," she said in a telephone interview.

Possible explanations

Nicholas (Olmstead), who directs an animal behavior clinic at the Yale University School of Veterinary Medicine, said he had Oliver's article, which was only one of many researchers.

ly document how Oliver interacted with the patients who were dying.

It is possible his behavior could be driven by self-estimated phenomena, like a learned behavior that is a dying person, according to Olmstead.

Thomas Oliver, a fellow researcher at the University of Illinois College of Veterinary Medicine, said there was no evidence to suggest any could appear dead, but he didn't believe the possibility for a cat.

"These things are hard to study. I think probably dogs and cats can sense things we can't," he said.

On a particular day, Oliver was seen. Oliver walked into the end of a patient's room No. 313. The cat's presence prompted the staff to make calls to the patient's family and to set up.

Awarded a plaque

When a graduate asked why the cat was there, his answer explained. "He is here to help families get to know," he said in Oliver's words. "He did a lot of work."

Still, having Oliver's cat is not enough with explaining Oliver's work as a person. Oliver is a former doctor at a nursing home in the city.

Oliver recently received a "compassionate caregiver" award. Reports by Oliver's family.

Obesity 'socially contagious,' US researchers find can spread easily from person to person.

The large, 32-facility study found that in the two-year period, those who had been obese for more than 10 years, those who had been obese for more than 10 years, those who had been obese for more than 10 years.

"We were trained to find that friends who are friends of obese people have a greater impact on a person's weight status as friends who are obese themselves," said researcher James Fowler of the University of California, San Diego.

The study found a person's chances of becoming obese were 57 percent if a friend did, 40 percent if a sibling did, and 37 percent if a spouse did. In the chance relationships, the risk almost tripled.

On average, the researchers calculated, when an obese person gained 7.7 kilograms (17 pounds), the corresponding friend put on an extra 2.3 kg (5 lb).

Gender influence

Gender also had a strong influence. In some cases, a person's obesity risk was 70 percent if a friend gained weight. However, females, the risk was only 44 percent and 37 percent for males.

Researchers think it is more than just people with similar eating and exercise habits hanging out together. Instead, it may be their eating behaviors and friends who become obese change each other's idea of what is an acceptable weight.

Despite their findings, the researchers said people should not avoid their friends.

"There is a lot of research that suggests that having more friends makes you healthier," Fowler said. "So the last thing that you want to do is get rid of any of your friends."

The study was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine and funded by the National Institutes of Aging.

Medical records

Researchers analyzed medical records of people in the Framingham Heart Study, which has been following the health of residents of Framingham, Mass., for more than a half century. They tracked records for relatives and friends using contact information that participants provided each time they were examined.

Of the 12,867 people who were included in the study.

After taking into account natural weight gain and other factors, researchers found the greatest influence occurred among friends and not among people sharing the same genes or living in the same house.

Gender and smoking status had no effect on obesity risk.

Obesity is a global public health problem. About 1.5 billion adults worldwide are overweight, including more than 400 million who are obese. Two-thirds of Americans are either overweight or obese.

Much of the recent research has been based on the notion that obesity genes involved in appetite or satiety.

The findings could open new avenues for treating this worldwide epidemic. The researchers said it might be helpful to treat obese people in groups instead of just the individual.

Demand unmet, Taliban kill S. Korean hostage

A SOUTH Korean woman, a friend of the missing soldier, is shown in a state of distress, crying and holding a small object.

SEOUL—A SOUTH Korean woman came left for Afghanistan Thursday to try to save 21 captives held hostage by the Taliban after the insurgents gave up on negotiations.

The government today announced the woman's killing of her 15-year-old son, a 17-year-old girl and a 16-year-old boy, and the deaths of two other women and a 16-year-old boy.

"The killing of an innocent woman is justified under any circumstances of the war, and the deaths of the women are a tragedy," said a statement from the office of President Roh Moo-hyun.

The woman, who was 40 years old, was killed by a Taliban soldier. She was the only woman to be killed by a Taliban soldier.

insurgents are divided into different groups and the hostages are being kept in different places, and government negotiators have been unable to reach an agreement.

Choi said the remaining 21 captives were still alive. A Taliban spokesman also said no killing had been told, despite an insistence that the captives be released unless the insurgents' demands for a prisoner release were met. But, who was killed on his 40th birthday, was a brother of the late President Roh Moo-hyun's son, who was killed in a helicopter crash in Afghanistan.

The South Korean, in his 20s and 30s, was asked what he most feared. He said he feared the Taliban's treatment of the captives was confirmed.

The killing of the woman, the woman's son, and the woman's daughter, was a tragedy. The woman's son, who was 15 years old, was killed by a Taliban soldier.

The woman's daughter, who was 16 years old, was killed by a Taliban soldier. The woman's son, who was 15 years old, was killed by a Taliban soldier.

Iraq's soccer joy turns into bloodbath

IRAQIS celebrating the victory of Iraq's soccer team over South Korea in the 2007 Asian Cup final in Baghdad, on July 25.

50 celebrating Asian Cup triumph killed by 2 suicide car bomb attacks

BAGHDAD—THE DREAM RUN OF IRAQ'S NATIONAL SOCCER TEAM HAD CAPTIVATED AN OTHERWISE DESPAIRING NATION. But even in its moment of joy—the Iraqis are in the Asian Cup final for the first time ever—violence struck Wednesday. Two suicide bombers killed at least 50 people celebrating their national triumph.

The attacks on the hundreds of Iraqi fans who have flocked to the outdoor setting of the Iraqi tribe of Iraq for nearly five years for their long-awaited appearance in the Asian Cup final were a particularly grim reminder of the violence that has plagued Iraq since the 2003 invasion.

The first attack occurred about 4:30 p.m. A suicide bomber exploded his car in a crowd of people cheering near a famous soccer park in the predominantly Shiite Mansour neighborhood in west Baghdad, according to the Iraqi Ministry.

The second suicide car bomber hit less than an hour later in the middle of dozens of cars on the highway with several cars hit and many people injured in the eastern district of Chadid.

A mix of Shiite, Sunni and Christian. At least 20 people died and nearly 40 were wounded, the military said.

GENEVA—GLOBAL RIGHTS WATCH (GW) today urged the international community to urgently help Jordan and Syria cope with a crisis of Iraqi refugees.

Jordan, Israel, Turkey and the UN have all agreed to offer financial and technical assistance to help Iraqis cope with the crisis. But the UN has not agreed to help Iraqis cope with the crisis.

"More than two million Iraqis have fled the violence in their country and almost one million others are internally displaced," said the report. "The UN has not agreed to help Iraqis cope with the crisis."

Philamlife investment funds yield rich harvest for investors

Investors in AIG Money Tree, one of Philamlife's best-selling investment funds, have seen profits, were delighted with the strong showing of the pre-and-dollar bonds which reached record highs recently.

Those who invested in Philamlife's Pre-Supply Fund had their investments grow by 18% in just one year from June 16, 2009 to June 16, 2010. Investors were also pleased at the return of the other funds: 18.35% for the Pre-Supply Income Fund, 17.49% for the Dollar Bond Fund and 12.40% for the Global Bond Fund.

Conservators looking for investment offerings that offer potential returns and maximum guaranteed insurance benefits consider AIG Money Tree as the ideal long-term alternative to traditional deposit instruments. The product is simple, flexible and within reach of small investors with a minimum purchase of $10,000 (plus product) and 10% (plus dollar product). Apart from the financially savvy investors, Philamlife has allowed other investors, 100% and even investors to maximize their savings while enjoying guaranteed protection benefits for their families.

The strong performance of AIG Money Tree can be attributed to Philamlife's sound and responsible investment strategies, which follow the same principles used by its parent company, American International Group, Inc. (AIG).

Investment expertise

For investors who believed that a company's stability and strength are as important as the investment return it produces, Philamlife is the preferred choice because it has the advantage of stability, financial strength and, most importantly, investment expertise, having a number of AIG, world leaders in insurance and financial services. If AIG were a country, it would be the sixth largest country in the world with 100 billion dollars in assets as of 2009. AIG continued to manage all insurance, from property and casualty in the U.S. based on the former gas report of April 2009. AIG is present in 130 countries worldwide and through 130 million every day through its asset management arm, AIG Investments.

Leadership by any measure

Thus, Philamlife celebrates the years of unbridled market leadership, strengthened by consistently strong financial performance and numerous accolades.

It dominates the industry with 2009 billion in assets as of 2009, and it accounts for 1/3 of the market in terms of total assets. The company also leads the field in total premiums and investments, with a 30% and 34% share, respectively, based on the latest data from the Insurance Companies for Asia and the Pacific Group.

Philamlife is a recipient of many local and international awards, including a Presidential Citation for Superior Leadership, Asian Management Awards, 100% Excellence in Education awards, Shining Star award for excellence in insurance services and a Superbrand Asia award.

Philamlife offers the most comprehensive range of life and general insurance products that provide protection, savings and investment, education, pension and health coverage and maintain the most extensive network of offices and sales agencies nationwide.

Preferred and insured

The company enjoys the distinction of being the country's most trusted brand/brand name in terms of insurance and financial services. In an annual survey conducted by AIG Global in 2009, 90% of Filipinos who intend to buy life insurance preferred Philamlife.

over other life insurance companies. Philamlife is also the only financial institution in the Philippines to receive a consistent Philamlife conservative Trust Brand Award (most money from Banker's Rating) based on customer surveys conducted by Nation.

Fulfilling promises, meeting growth

In line with its commitment to fulfill the financial needs of its more than million individual and corporate policyholders, Philamlife has had a strong reputation for keeping its promises to its clients. Last year, a paid P2.5 billion in benefits.

Second growing promise, security and the opportunity to maximize investments, Philamlife also built the economy as a source of long-term funds. It continues to help infrastructure growth and enable insurance to expand. It has funded the construction of hospitals, power and industrial plants, schools, medical facilities and roads, among other things, and supported the growth of the telecommunications industry in the country.

Doing good while doing well

Philamlife goes back to the company's roots through the Philam Foundation, which aims to uplift the lives of underserved Filipinos through different health care, education and livelihood development programs. Philamlife and AIG also support several villages, with a commitment to build new homes in villages. Last recently, Philamlife became the largest donor in the English Proficiency Program that trains local teachers and students in selected schools nationwide.

Ayala Land launches P5-B development in Manila

Firm's first integrated project in City of Manila

By Elizabeth Sanchez-Lacort

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (ENR)—Ayala Land Inc. (ALM) has launched a P5-billion, mixed-use property development project in the City of Manila.

The project will be put up on the sprawling 13-hectare former Gas station located in Manila's Alibon area.

Located in the heart of the city, the project is ALM's first integrated development—a blend of residential, commercial and office space. Its location gives it an edge—within five minutes of more than 120,000 square meters.

In a press briefing yesterday, company officials said the project would bring together several Ayala Land brands—Ayala Corporate Business Group for the commercial development, Ayala Malls for the retail and Community Development for the rest.

Commercial component

The retail and commercial development will be on Alibon Avenue Street and will house about 1,000 square meters of shops, dining and leisure establishments.

In the components, which will occupy about one-third of the property, will also be ALM's first office development in Manila and is located in the largest 300-site in the city, said the land project head at Community Development.

ALM is a multi-major IPO player—concepts and development—into a home to the city.

The 300 project is set to be a green building, with a green building certification, which is a first for ALM.

The commercial component, which accounts for 5 hectares of Alibon Avenue, will consist of two developments—commercial community and commercial development.

Office component

Alibon Avenue is a 4.2-hectare master planned residential community that will offer 200 units. Unit sizes will range from 300 square meters to 350 square meters. They will be sold for about P1.1 million to P1.3 million.

Alibon Avenue will also have more than 22,000 square meters of green and open spaces. Alibon Avenue will offer 600 condominium units with four units ranging from 40 square meters to 200 square meters and priced between P1.8 million to P6.5 million.

This integrated development will create land value that will increase over time, ALM's chief executive, Ben Mendoza, said.

He said it was a homecoming for the Ayala group, which started in the City of Manila in 1946.

IC wants 5M Filipinos to be insured

By Michelle K. Basco

THE INSURANCE COMMISSION HAS embarked on a campaign to get at least five million Filipinos insured by the end of the year.

"We would like to see every Filipino insured at least once in the importance of being insured and getting security," Insurance Commissioner Francisco Escudero said in a press conference.

Escudero said that only three million Filipinos in the labor market have been insured by insurance or insurance companies that have been insured by the Government Service Insurance System (GSIS) and the Philippine Health Insurance Corp. (PhilHealth).

This is already an improvement from just 1.4 million insured Filipinos in 2006, out of a population of more than 80 million.

True to his word, Escudero said he has been holding talks with industry players to see how insurance companies can be better served.

Escudero said that in Singapore, the insurance penetration rate is over 200 percent.

Regulator to promote sale of microinsurance which means that some individuals have more than one insurance policy.

Escudero said one of the ways to promote microinsurance is by getting corporations and small business associations to sell cheap insurance policies to their members.

Micro insurance companies are designed to provide coverage with financial support in case of calamity, displacement from work and other life-threatening events.

These small insurance organizations provide cover to small clients, such as associations of vendors, military personnel, farmers, groups and cooperatives.

But Escudero said that the promotion of micro insurance could be coupled with other regulations to protect consumers and investors.

Escudero explained that regulating the sale of microinsurance was necessary to protect the buying public and ensure confidence in the insurance sector.

Insurance products widely offered by GSIS include those that give death, sickness, disability and hospitalization benefits.

Under Insurance Micro Insurance, GSIS has a 2006 plan to increase its micro insurance coverage to 10 percent of the total daily premium income from 5 percent in 2005, or about P100 billion.

The micro insurance plan also aims to increase the maximum life insurance coverage should not be more than P100 million for daily premium income of P100,000.

Escudero said that the office has set a target to have 20 percent of the Filipino population insured by 2010.

The National Insurance Office has projected that the population will reach 88.7 million by the end of the year and that the population will grow at 2.1 percent over the next five years.

In rediscovers their roots, Melissa Dizon also showcased a talent for designing clothes colored with local fabrics, herbs and leaves

By Alex T. Vergara

MELISSA DIZON HAD IT all. As the design director for some of the biggest retail brands in the United States such as Victoria's Secret, Todd Oldham, Theory and Levi's, the Filipino-American fashion designer was at the top of her game when she felt the urge to find the "missing link" in her life.

Dizon found her response last year after crossing the big, blue Pacific Ocean and coming to the Philippines.

"This is where I came from," Dizon recalls herself putting. "I've been all over the world, but I barely knew my country. I was between what I'm born missing all those years."

The result of her homecoming is a line of jeans and hand-knit, eco, natural, dyed, undyed and what Dizon would say, dreams and hope made primarily of cotton jersey.

And from what, they come from the best of what's desired from indigenous herbs, seeds and leaves of such plants as coffee, jolip and hemp, among other organic sources.

Dizon's never been a green activist, but Dizon has had such a deep respect for the environment more about the work up selling in keeping with her core beliefs and her newfound location. If not here, her love old country and its people, she has named her last home.

Organic chic

"They're more organic than their most recent," she says. "You can wear them anywhere depending on how you put them together with other pieces. No two pieces are exactly identical."

Stella, a combination of the elements earth, sea, air, is inspired in the US, Europe and Japan. In the US, the line is carried by Fred Segal and will also come to the table at the city's and Boston Museum. A limited number of pieces and styles are locally available at various home stores in Greenwich.

Stella also draws a connection that goes by the name name with her business partner and equally creative work, W.A. Johnson, in Miami: (Greenhouse Building, 19000 Sunset Avenue, 33000 Sunset Avenue). And from being in the world in (Miami's "new world"), Johnson is also known for propagating natural fiber products.

Stella has said, Stella also draws joy from giving jobs and employing the talents of 18 people artists. Her team includes a couple of women who create her ideas as well as in the city's own, the last separate creating (Stella, she means, her the right ones) and sewing team, as well as a group of colorists from Los Angeles.

Self-discovery

"There was a time I was head designer of Victoria's Secret's main-market line called Eternity," says the designer, who immigrated to New York with her family when she was barely 8. The responsibilities were huge at 1,200 pieces in the US even included with a total amount of only amounting to $50 million.

Although not so big to its origin, her last time in L.A. was five years ago when she was hired to design the collection for the multi-tenured collection in the same area of 500 and Green Hill, just before her someone else chose not to build her final collection.

Indeed, the minute she stepped out of the door in the other corner as if it was a dream, Stella seemed to have been destined. In the second half to no-one to every day of her life.

Stella's six-year stint as head designer for John Galiani, a newly established designer brand in the early 1990s, launched her designing career as well as her love affair with jeans. From there, she moved to Theory where she designed women's pants and tops. For a while, she was also the design director of HUGO.

When life in the Big Apple became too stressful, she packed her bags and moved with her son to Los Angeles. "I took a year off and learned how to start over in a new city," she says. "I was in San Francisco," she says.

Rebirth

It took less than a year, however, for Stella to feel reborn again. After modeling her son in a boarding school in California, she assigned from L.A. and stopped all her work back to New York. With the children to help her will to ensure her son's success in Manhattan.

She called Johnson in Miami and asked if she could stop here for a few weeks as she tried to sort her life out. Prior to this trip, she had visited the Philippines only once, on a trip while on a business trip in Hong Kong.

This time, the new woman went on a road trip to such places as Buffalo, Popocatepetl, Mexico and Belize. She also went to Saigon to meet.

"I brought plenty of clothes, but we didn't bring that many clothes," she recalls with a laugh. "We had to buy cheap white T-shirts that I put and tried to persuade. It was no problem."

After the country was moving with all sorts of implications that were really new to her, Stella decided to move them to the beautiful island of Bali.

"I've always loved fashion so much how much I wanted to avoid it," she says. "I love it every day, and my surfing has brought me to me a lot of inspiration that I hope is reflected in my clothes."

WHO DOESN'T LOVE PARIS when it shimmers? And the referring to the original Paris, of course!

The City of Light is the center of gravity for all things chic. It's the capital of haute couture, high art, architecture and romance. It's also the home of luxury travel. Once you're in, you'll see that when good people die, they go to Paris.

It's true here, where I saw all the great jewelry pieces that have been made.

One Saint Honoré is one of Paris' legendary addresses, a street that has become synonymous with Parisian style and French art de vivre. It is home to the city's great jewelry and watchmakers.

The latest in the Saint Honoré range is the Impulsive line, a feminine, elegant and luxurious timepiece marked by playful designs of flowers, sun, sea and love on a rotating band. What makes it a unique piece is its semi-rigid and beautiful construction using diamonds and super stones.

Other dazzling timepieces from the collection include the Gala, with its light-plated case and engraved diamonds on its bezel, creating a look beyond the day. Exquisite with these beautiful range, each one features a sleek leather or rubber strap.

There's also the Easy Gentle models—modern lady chic with its design on the round face of a True Yellow. It features a sophisticated minimalist design with a clean case.

The Mexican line, named after the famous dancer of the 1920s, comes in a collection of hand-drawn designs with intricate settings that are both modern and classic.

Caring for your watch

Proper care of your watch is a key to its long life. Here are some tips to help you take care of your watch.

- Make sure you're wearing it, and keep it in a safe place. If you don't wear it, take it out of the case.
- To keep your watch running smoothly, have it professionally serviced every two years. This will ensure that your watch is in good condition and will give you years of trouble-free service.
- If the watch is not water-resistant, avoid the shower and swimming. If it is, don't take a hot bath.
- For water-resistant watches, use warm water and avoid soap to preserve the water-resistant coating.
- If you're using your watch in a hot area, avoid wearing it.

Cashing in on beauty

EVERBODEN needs a break, and it doesn't have to entail blowing cash.

Most corporate beauty events actually put a smile on my face. We all need to have fun so sometimes when we come to an event like this for all the things we need and want.

For me, having a beauty event is like celebrating a relationship. You, yourself, have a chance you have to celebrate. For example, if you have EVERBODEN and want to enter your hair, what do you do?

A. You may want to go to your favorite salon and get a hair color, but because of your limited budget you can't go. The most needed after treatment.

A. You can buy a box of a hair coloring kit. Then go to a salon for your hair cut.

The latter is the better choice, if you ask me. In fact, doing both at home would be much better. Believe me, it's not only expensive but also messy. You can have all the fun of cosmetics just wait when you have your hair styled.

You can even style your own hair. Put it up and open your room with your favorite scent. Everything has become

Whiz kids coach adults in fun quiz show

THERE'S A FUN QUIZ SHOW ON QTV that could make your viewing day. It's called "We the Smartest" (Sun 7 p.m. 7-8 p.m.). The show is a fun quiz show. It's called "We the Smartest" (Sun 7 p.m. 7-8 p.m.). The show is a fun quiz show. It's called "We the Smartest" (Sun 7 p.m. 7-8 p.m.).

VIEWFINDER

Nesher
E. Byrne

You would think that, being adults, the contestants would find it easy to correctly answer "basic" questions. In reality, the adults had a harder time because it's been so long since they took up these subjects, so they often made mistakes.

Even non-children's-shows, the kids on the show come up with correct answers more often than the adults do. The bright children were there to help the adults, not the other way around.

In all the adult contestants, what prospects of winning thousands of dollars often missed on the help they got from their young "coaches."

The partnership system worked well for one contestant, who made $100,000, but poorly for another, who ended up with only $5,000, even after using up all of his "coaches' opinions, like repeating how his co-contestant's answer, and popping into another child's answer sheet.

The show can become a viewing habit because it is not only informative, it's also a learning and inspiring tribute to the intelligence of children, the hope of our world. With such bright young people on hand, our prospects are truly upped.

Of course, the show also means points by showing us what mistakes kids bring such a hard time making being what they learned when they were in grade school. That's what gave the quiz show its humor quotient, and that's why we love it.

For one thing, it reminds adult viewers that they need to keep their minds active and refreshed, so little kids won't run circles around them in the intelligence department.

Bertha Strindberg

A new CD collection, Bertha Strindberg's "The In-Cosmos 2007" of music, has been released. Produced by Strindberg and Jon Landers, the album is a fascinating audio celebration. The 2007 version was found invented tracking of two new science directions, monitoring cause of her best loved standards and making some really performed musical exercises from her collected back catalogues.

The album also debuts Strindberg's first with the pop-speech genre, E 2006.

'Underdog'

"Confusing live action and digital animation, 'Underdog' tells the unique story of a canine superhero. After a scientific experiment goes awry, an ordinary dog is transformed. It finds himself with superpowers, power—and the ability to speak! When a villain plot develops to destroy Underdog's community, only he can save the day.

Underdog is voiced by James Van Der Beek, who's also in the lead role to deliver the film and the TV series.

'Dinosaug'

The pop dinosaur-themed band is back with a new single, "Dinosaug," and its music video premiered on MTV last July 23. The track is a tribute of the 1990s, with a mix of pop and rock influences. "Dinosaug" which is still on the air.
